MEET ON JULY 29

Arrangements for the holding of Welsh day by the Cambrian society of this city were started at a meeting of the society Friday night and the day set for Thursday, July 28, at Saltair. The contract has already been closed for the place and committees to have charge of the details will be appointed in the near future.

Complete details of the excursion have not yet been arranged, but it is well known that there will be a general gath-ering of the claus, with music and such a renewal of old acquaintance as is al-ways noticeable among the Welsh peo-ple and the descendants of the "little an-less" kingdom."

Tramp." ing. 8:15.

From tragedy to coinedy. From the lissnessque plays to that of Bracco. This is the change in repertoire of Madame Nazimova during the week she has been at the Salt Lake theater. In whatever role she has appeared she was better than the one preceding, in the child wife Nora she was charming; in the morbid Hedda; she was faschating; in the morbid Hedda; she was faschating; in the Comtesse she was irresistible. Wonderful changes these. Wonderful transformation. And no me but the gifted actress, as this delightful Russian woman, could do this. She has charmed her Salt Lake audiences, she has them at her feet; she has them captive.

And this gifted woman has ideas of her own about the drama about literature, about art. Says this artist.

"I never could understand why people could address."

about art. Says this artist:

"I never could understand why people could admire a painting wherein a divine despair is pletured, or where an atmosphere of melancholy pervades, yet go to losen and condomn him for his so-called merbidness, his hopeless view of life. In a patoting a face containing an exquisite sorrow may be pletured. There may be in it despair, resignation, sorrow coupled with hope. Whatever it is the spectator does not stop at the technique, the perfection of line and coloring. He seen if he be a real appreciator of art, the soul boiling that painted countenance, the temptations the struggles, the fails which must have been undersone before the artist could eath the look. Poes the picture displease him for that reason:

temptations, the struggles, the falls which must have been undergone before the artist could catch the look. Poes the picture displease him for that reason; does he turn away to the inferior work of a less masterful hand, where the face or scene, whatever it may be, is all light, gay, anhuated and aumy?

"Yet this is practically what the critics of theen and his kind do. For the end of the picture that lisen draws and places upon the stage is powerful, tragle, moving. And more often than not his characters and in a climax of mental and moral courage that is as inspiring as the faces of the great masters of the brush. Granting for the sake of argument that lisen is pessimistic, is there not an incomparable grandeur about the moral resurgence of a character which has known the sorddiness of the world, yet has the strength to rise above it, to excape from the mud in spite of all fhat—let the method of rising be desult if need be?"

Let those who enjoy the conventionally happy things of literature, drama, poetry and art do so. They form a large class, have as much right to tisir opinions as this follower of Ibsen and from their particular point of view are just as correct as site. But it would seem that their point of view is not as wide as his. For the dominant note of the greatest masters of Herature, drama, art and poetry has been as a rule the sombre. It is in pathox that the great masters have reached their supreme efforts, no matter what line of art they have followed. Not that none have reached great heights through depicting unadulerated optimism, but their numbers are comparatively few. This is not an opinion based upon individual convictions, for many of the master writers have expressed it more cloquently.

And after saying this, this women goes upon the stage and does what! Makes

At the matines today and at tenight's performance. Arthur Cunningham will be seen for the last times in Joseph Murray's everlastingly popular Irish drama, "The Kerry Gow." Starting tomorrow night. "Shaun Rhue, Joseph Murphy's other famous Irish play, will be presented by Mr. Cumingham and his excellent company for the entire week, with matiness Thursday and Saturday. "Shaun Rhue" will be presented in an equally artistic and magnificent manner as characterized the production of "Kerry Gow."

The public still throng to the Grand to see the fine performances of the Arington company of players. Fusiness has been of the best all week. Commencing Sunday-night, this company will present for the week a five-act consedy-metodrama, entitled. 'On the Stroke of Twelve.' A matines will be given at 2:36 this afternoon of "A Runaway Tratep."

vidual convictions, for many of the master writers have expressed it more cloquently.

And after snying this, this women goes upon the stage and does what! Makes you and I cry. Yes, actually shed bays, not a few, but a great many. Why! she is an actress. She tells a story upon the stage. It is portrayed in real life every day. Somewhere, Newspaper people see it. They don't print it. Why? It's the way of the world.

And on Friday night, as said, she quitted tragedy. She quitted the grussome. She quitted the grussome. She quitted a great many things upon the stage and jumped into comedy. And the audience loved her as they did in the grussome Heddis.

Oh, Nazimova, your charm is in what? In your personality? Yes. In your individuality? Yes. Why? The personification of this of that. And yet after all, your individual self. Others have essayed the roles you have. Others have postrayed the roles you have. Others have been admirable. Others have heen beautiful. You are superb. And in this connection let us quote a New Yorker who says: "You are the personification of beauty, of grace, of fashion. You are winsome. You are human to a striking degree. You tell a story." What more can one say?

Salt Lake play-goers will always give degree. You tell a story." What more can one say?

Salf Lake play-goers will always give you a welcome, whether you come as Nora, whether you come as the Council.

Nora, whether you come as the Council. But you will always have a welcome in Salt Lake City. And when you go back to your home in the land of the great white car, when you appear in the Capital city of the greatest empire on earth, when Nicholas II applands you in your mitive country, do not forget that in the land of the saints there are people who have seen you portray characters as they have never before seen them portrayed, and who will rejoice as will the people of your country do over your success. Salt Lake will always have a warm spot in its heart for you.

Madame Nazimova will present the "Comtesse Coquette" this afternoon and this evening, when the engagement will close.

That the bill at the Orpheum this week is extraordinarily good is indicated in the attendance, which has broken all records. The great dramatic episode of the prize ring. 'At the Sound of the Gong.' I which 'Young Pricey,' the well-known local boxer, takes part, is the headline act, and it is of exciting interest. Important work, while the Amaros sisters on the trapeze and in juggling, and Tony wilson and Mile, Holoise on the tramplin mat and horizontal bars, furnish the accordance features. There are a number of other turns fully in keeping with the excellence of these acts.

At the matinee today and at tonight's
